

for the Kahumana Residential Treatment Center. She is also conducting research with the UH Department of Psychology to look at the impact of managed care on the severely mentally ill.

Farrington Highway is a fact of life, as Oliveira commutes from her Waikele home to Wai'anae.

There's much to be done. This is confirmed by Annie Siufanua, clinic intake coordinator at the mental health center. "On the Wai'anae Coast, we don't have anger management training, or programs for sex abuse or domestic violence," says Siufanua. "One psychiatrist comes three days a week. Sometimes you can't get an ambulance—there are only two for 65,000 people. The entire health care outlook is getting worse."

That doesn't deter Oliveira. "Our mission is to improve the health status of native Hawaiians. It's worth it if you can make a difference in even one person's life." She says, pausing. "But you pray at night that in 10 years the daughter of your client won't be in the clinic for the same thing."

By the time Oliveira finishes a Wai'anae day, the sandy beaches border the highway gleam gold in the sinking sun. Already in her short career, she has served Wai'anae well. The community has also served her. It's here she developed her idea that "there's not enough for us Hawaiians at the policy level. That's why we have a hard time getting the funding we need."

Driving home, she keeps one eye on the road, the other scanning the mountains and the sea in this community where she has learned so much. "I couldn't have asked God to put me in a better place to prepare me to go home to work in Hāna," she says.

And that preparation is already paying off. Julie Oliveira has recently begun providing individual and family therapy in Hāna two weekends a month.

CELEBRATING THE FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF DEATH VALLEY NATIONAL PARK

HON. JERRY LEWIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 9, 1999

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the creation of Death Valley National Park, which protects and provides public access to some of the most dramatic scenery in the United States in a pristine desert environment that is unmatched in the world.

Death Valley became the largest national park in the lower 48 states when it was changed from national monument status and expanded to 3.3 million acres in 1994. More than 1.3 million people travel to the park now, and the historic Furnace Creek Inn remains open year-round—even through 130-degree summer days.

This spectacular park includes the lowest point in the Western Hemisphere—Badwater, at 282 feet below sea level—and mountain peaks over 11,000 feet tall. Much of the park is breathtakingly desolate wilderness, but visitors can also relive the time of the Gold Rush through ghost towns and the internationally famous Scotty's Castle.

In the past five years, the park staff has grown to include an archeologist, a botanist and hydrologist to research and protect the unique natural resources. The staff has successfully begun a multi-year effort to capture and remove the more than 500 burros who were introduced by miners, and who compete for scarce food and water with native wildlife like the Desert Bighorn Sheep. Non-native vegetation is also being removed.

The staff has also restored and improved historical resources like Scotty's Castle, and installed 60 new wayside interpretive exhibits, with plans for 50 more.

The park service has made efforts to ensure compensation and flexibility for private owners whose property was included in the park, although some problems remain. We must urge the park service to make resolution of those inholder problems a top priority in the years to come.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my colleagues to join me in congratulating Park Superintendent Dick Martin and his staff for creating a world-class national park in this unique natural environment. Their efforts have ensured that the treasures of the desert can be viewed by many more visitors—and protected for all those who will come in the future.

TRIBUTE TO SERGEANT THOMAS J. SHANLEY

HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKEY

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 9, 1999

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. Mr. Speaker, at a time when crime concerns are on every citizen's mind, those who have dedicated their lives to law enforcement are to be commended. I would like to make a special commendation to Sergeant Thomas J. Shanley, a devoted law enforcement officer from Indiana's First Congressional District. Sergeant Shanley retired from the Schererville Police Department in September of this year after 21½ years of dedicated service. Sergeant Shanley will be honored by his family, friends, and members of the Schererville Police Department at a testimonial dinner Friday, November 12, 1999 at Teibel's Restaurant in Schererville, Indiana.

Thomas Shanley joined the Schererville Police Department on February 28, 1978 and graduated from the 51st class of the Indiana Law Enforcement Academy in July of 1978. He began his duties at the Schererville Police Department in the Patrol Division where in February of 1980 he was promoted to 1st Class Patrolman. Five years later he was promoted to the rank of Corporal and in 1989 was promoted to Sergeant. During his career with the Schererville Police Department, Sergeant Shanley served as a Certified firearms Instructor, an Instructor for the citizens Policy Academy, Coordinator for the Field training program, and Coordinator for the Department Training program. He was most recently elected President of Training Coordinators for the Northwest Indiana Law Enforcement Training Center.

While Sergeant Shanley has dedicated considerable time and energy to his work with the Schererville Police Department, he has never limited the time he gives to his most important interest, his family. He and his wife Kathryn have one son, Patrick, age 10.

On this special day, I offer my heartfelt congratulations to Sergeant Shanley. His large circle of family and friends can be proud of the contributions this prominent individual has made to the law enforcement community and the First Congressional District of Indiana.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you and my other distinguished colleagues join me in commending Sergeant Thomas Shanley for his lifetime of service and dedication to the people of Northwest Indiana and the citizens of the United States. Sergeant Shanley can be proud of his service to Indiana's First Congressional district. He worked hard to make the Town of Schererville a safer place in which to live and work. I sincerely wish him a long, happy, healthy, and productive retirement.

INTRODUCTION OF A DISCHARGE PETITION FOR A MEDICARE PRESCRIPTION DRUG BENEFIT

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 9, 1999

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce a rule for a discharge petition to force Congress to consider a Medicare prescription drug benefit. The rule would bring H.R. 1495, the "Access to Prescription Medications in Medicare Act of 1999," to the floor for debate and open amendments. My bill provides a new Medicare benefit for prescription drugs—with a $200 deductible, $1700 in new benefits, with a 20 percent co-pay and stop loss protection for beneficiaries who would otherwise spend more than $3000 out of pocket on prescription drugs. This attempt to get a bill considered in the House is a way to force Republicans to finally address the issue of access to affordable comprehensive prescription drugs for seniors.

A number of my colleagues and I have offered proposals for a way out of the current predicament which is particularly unfair to seniors lacking prescription drug coverage. The President has put forth his own Medicare prescription drug proposal which has no new deductible, requires a 50 percent co-pay of $2000 in 2002, rising to $5000 in 2008, and no stop loss protection. The "Prescription Drug Fairness for Seniors Act" (H.R. 664) introduced by Representatives Allen et. al. also has tremendous support. While this legislation would not create a new Medicare drug benefit, it would extend discounts to seniors equivalent to the discounts obtained by other large purchasers.

As a recent Families USA study makes painfully clear, the cost of prescription drugs has become unbearable for America's more than 14 million Medicare beneficiaries who cannot afford prescription drug coverage. The Families USA study finds that seniors, the last major insured consumer group without a prescription drug benefit, are paying prices that are rising four times faster than the rate of inflation. According to this well-researched study, these drug prices support profit margins for the makers of those drugs that averaged 20 percent, while the median margin for Fortune 500 companies is only 4.4 percent.
